Contributions

Andreas Bogossian wrote the Creators perspective, covering arguments for and against piracy from the viewpoint of content creators, with a focus on income, incentives, access, and distribution. Also contributed heavily to writing the code for the website visual design.

Hai Dang wrote the Consumers perspective, covering consumer motivations for piracy including cost, platform fragmentation, censorship circumvention, and archiving.

Oskari Hiedanpää wrote the Digital Ownership perspective, covering subscription versus ownership models, platform dependency, and the ethics of digital licensing and DRM.

Son Tong wrote the Government's perspective, tracing the legislative history of copyright from the Berne Convention to recent modernization laws, and analysing government enforcement policy through social contract theory, Kantian deontology, and consequentialism.

All group members contributed to the brainstorming of content and overall structure. Cross-referencing between sections and removal of duplicate content was done collaboratively.
