Contributions

Andreas Bogossian wrote the Creators perspective, covering arguments for and against piracy from the viewpoint of content creators, with a focus on income, incentives, access, and distribution.

Dang wrote the Consumers perspective, covering consumer motivations for piracy including cost, platform fragmentation, censorship circumvention, and archiving.

Oskari wrote the Digital Ownership perspective, covering subscription versus ownership models, platform dependency, and the Stop Killing Games initiative.

All group members contributed to the overall structure and site design, and reviewed each other's sections before submission.
